

Short Social Post

Trust is what philanthropy should fund.

A library becomes durable civic infrastructure not by adding services, but by listening for what residents value, adapting without paternalism, building reciprocal relationships, and pairing generosity with sustainable administration. Trust is what philanthropy should fund.